

Under certain circumstances we need to make sure that the vacuum flow that the gripper propagates is directed towards the middle section of the products. This is when we use the curtains, in order to maximize the airflow in the middle by preventing the flow to escape on the sides. These curtains can be combined with side clamps, and are therefore available in the same different set ups as these.

